PARIS GASTRONOMY

The gastronomic meal of the French has been inscribed on the Unesco 'List of Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity' and Paris is certainly the best place to enjoy it!

There are several Michelin-starred restaurants in the city, and new restaurants, takeaway concepts and fine food stores regularly add to the vibrant food scene. There is no shortage of places serving modern, creative cuisine, inspired by the now-famous culinary movement that started in 2000: Le Fooding®.

Current food trends in the capital range from a rise in the popularity of street food to a craze for multidisciplinary restaurants. You can dine at a tiny restaurant or at a grocer's, watch professional chefs cooking, enjoy a special set menu, or learn alongside a Michelin-starred chef. There are so many ways to experience good food in Paris!

NEW PLACES AND TRENDS

New fashions, new concepts: the Fooding® spirit is bringing a creative touch to Parisian gastronomy.

> Top trends: Canteens and gourmet light lunches

Street food and canteens for healthy eating are fast becoming a favourite lunchtime option. A huge number of new places cropped up all over Paris in 2015, while more established restaurants opened up second, third or fourth branches. In the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 9th, 10th, 11th and 18th arrondissements, a trendy new canteen-style place opens practically every month. The secret of their success: attractive decor and a tempting food theme, e.g. naan bread, burgers, 100% cheese, gluten free, Thai or fresh-from-the-market. Customers sit at the counter, at refectory tables or on school chairs. Takeaways are also popular in these districts, where many office workers use their lunch hour as an excuse to set off on a foodie quest.

>The latest Parisian fad: Good coffee

The fragrance of good coffee has wafted through the French capital since the opening a few years ago of pioneering coffee shops like Café Lomi and Café Coutume. They source their beans from the craft roaster Brûlerie de Belleville, which supplies the finest coffeehouses in Paris. Serving artisan roasted espresso, filter and cappuccino, plus a wide range of gourmet coffees to sample with guidance from baristas, these places boasting all the latest equipment are havens for coffee enthusiasts. Solicitous service and personalized roasting workshops add to their appeal. Wooden tables and a cosy atmosphere encourage people to stop by at any time of day to nibble homemade granola, an organic salad or a slice of lemon cake with a piping hot cup of richly aromatic coffee.

Tables d'hôtes for a quick snack

Tables d'hôtes in grocery stores, shop areas in restaurants, bars to eat at in markets, tasting areas in shops, hotel restaurants, and restaurants that double as bars, clubs or art galleries: the trend is for breaking down frontiers and blurring genres, for restaurants designed as lifestyle venues, and especially a trend for concept establishments.

Grocery stores with a few tables where you can wind up your shopping spree with a light meal are very popular. At Claus, there are great breakfast products to buy and taste on the premises. At the Alain Milliat shop, people come from afar for high-quality fruit juices to enjoy with flavoursome and healthy snacks. Causses has some of the best gourmet products, from charcuterie to dairy products, as well as fruit and vegetables; small tables d'hôtes enable customers to enjoy a snack while doing their shopping. On the first floor of the Grande Epicerie, the store's restaurant, La Table, is bathed in light and you can have lunch here with a view of the chicest retail displays in Paris. Not forgetting the many tasting counters: Ayamé, for sushi, Artisan de la Truffe and La Pause Rive Gauche. The newly revamped Galleries Lafayette Maison & Gourmet, which moved to new premises at the end of 2014, houses 14 eateries serving freshly-prepared food. Finally, La Boutique des saveurs, in the Saint-Martin covered market, strives to showcase producers from France's national parks: their products are labelled 'Parc Naturel'. This ever-popular market also houses Allen's Market, the new address of New Yorker Joe Allen, where you can enjoy a 100% USA snack in the grocery section. Merci, the fashion, home decor and design shop, has an organic-vegetable canteen on the shop's ground floor, and its own bar. And the 'lounge', an upstairs 150 m. loft at the Cinéma du Panthéon, is handy for film buffs, who can tuck into the day's specials or enjoy a cake or pastry with a nice cup of tea. Nanashi, the organic ethical brand in rue de Paradis, has opened on the lower ground floor of the private mansion housing the Bonpoint brand. And wine shop Le Caviste Bio has several table d'hôtes in its cellar: 300 different wines and 10 dishes of the day.

> The Fooding® ethos

Fooding® was launched at the instigation of Nova magazine in 2000. The word is a contraction of 'food' and 'feeling', and the movement was created to give a modern spin to gastronomy that was resting on the laurels of its Michelin-starred cuisine. And now Fooding® is celebrating 15 years of existence with a focus on the cuisine of the faubourgeois: in other words, the Paris 'bobo'. This foodie 'retrospective' spotlights 28 dishes popular with the bourgeois-bohemian crowd, including carrot cake, sushi with foie gras, pulled pork sandwiches, and baby leeks and oysters with gribiche sauce. So 2016 is offering a fresh take on the Fooding® concept: a genuinely innovative way to envisage and experience food. The secret of its success: creative and trendy cooking brimming with surprises and new twists. Events like Fooding® Week and the Grand Summer Fooding® are organized throughout the capital to familiarize the public with this innovative approach to cooking. Plus, every year, the Fooding® bureau publishes a guide featuring restaurants around the world to enable people to discover new culinary talents and daring gourmet initiatives. The guide slots restaurants into a variety of categories such as 'So good!', 'Feel good', 'Hurt me!' and 'Late night hunger'. Every year, there is a list of prizewinners in each category.

> Paris turns 'Omnivore'

For more than 10 years, the Omnivore Food Festival has unveiled the creativity of a young generation of cooks from all backgrounds. Since 2012, the event has taken on a new global dimension by becoming a travelling cooking festival called the 'Omnivore World Tour Paris Food Festival'. During the year, 12 major cities, including Paris, play host to the caravan-big top, chefs' master classes (sweet and savoury food) and other gastronomic evening functions and tasting sessions.

The rise of the 'neo-bistrot'

'Bistronomy' (a blend of 'bistrot' and 'gastronomy'), a term coined in the 1990s to describe affordable restaurants (menus at around €30) with a small team of staff, modest premises, an informal vibe and inventive cooking, has transformed itself in recent times into the concept of the 'neo-bistrot'. These friendly, noisy canteen-style places are increasingly popular. Blending a restaurant ethos and communal dining, they have friendly service, a chalkboard menu of seasonal dishes, tattooed walls, creative young cooks and, as often as not, fusion food mixing French and Asian influences. It's the new face of bistronomy!

THEMED RESTAURANTS IN PARIS

Paris has restaurants catering to foodies of all stripes: monomaniacs, ethical eaters, vegetarians and meat lovers.

> Monomaniacs

Specialised restaurants for fans (of crab, caviar, turffles, eggs, roast chicken, etc.) and food bars serving a single dish: quenelles, soup, oysters, blinis or mozzarella. Pure delight for monomaniacs.

> 'Meating' out

Despite the spread and popularity of vegetarian cuisine in Paris in the past few years, red meat has made a big comeback. Argentinean canteens, American-style steakhouses, and restaurants with a grill or fireplace for cooking meat in front of customers, like the trendy 'Beaucoup', are much in vogue. The height of chic is getting your meat from Yves-Marie le Bourdonnec, the new star among butchers and creator of the movement 'I love bidoche', or from Hugo Desnoyer, the butcher who supplies Michelin-starred chefs.

AN AFTERNOON SNACK

PARIS GASTRONOMY

With any number of cosy and/or chic tea rooms, not to mention chocolatiers and pastry shops, Paris is a paradise for those with a sweet tooth!

> For chocoholics

Throughout the year, and particularly at festive periods, master chocolate makers devote their expertise and artistry to satisfying gourmet chocolate fans. All of which constitute a delicious chocolate itinerary to follow in Paris. And, to learn more about chocolate, Paris's chocolate museum Choco-Story retraces the history of cocoa and chocolate.

> Luxury cakes and pastries

Another cornerstone of Paris gastronomy is deluxe cakes and pastries, and the great names associated with it: Ladurée, Dalloyau, Gérard Mulot and Pierre Hermé, but also Christophe Michalak, the world patisserie champion who has his own patisserie school, workshop and boutique. The list of high-end patissiers also includes Hugo & Victor, whose shop resembling a cabinet of curiosities unveils a whole new take on the art of patisserie, the great Japanese pastry chef Sadaharu Aoki, who creates exquisite fusion pastries and, more recently, Ciel, a Japanese pastry shop specializing in angel food cake.

IN AN ORIGINAL SETTING

The decor of a restaurant can be just as important as what's on your plate. Here is a selection of restaurants with a difference: surprising, quirky, artistic, sporty or miniature, and places with a view.

> In the comfort of your own home

Long working hours and commutes cut into the leisure time of many Parisians, for whom eating out is virtually impossible. So it's easy to see why so many companies offering home-delivered meals have sprung up in various parts of the city. Options include ready-to-heat meals prepared by young chefs, food from Michelin-starred restaurants, picnic hampers and ready-to-cook meal kits. If it's grocery shopping you don't have time for, you can have ingredients delivered: fruit and vegetables from local producers; premium cuts of meat to make a steak tartare or carpaccio; biodynamic wines. Just pick up your smartphone and order!

PARIS GASTRONOMY

Some places go beyond food to propose a veritable lifestyle experience, with two or more options - a restaurant, a bar, a dance floor, a grocery store, a tea room, a bookshop. A coffee shop doubling as a bicycle store, a shop selling design items where you can also eat a hotdog, a fine food store with tables for communal dining: there are all kinds of combinations - and styles of decor - in these trendy new places, which are often situated in a loft.

WINE RELATED

Wine bars, wine tasting, oenology lessons ... Paris will teach you everything you need to know about wine!

> Wine bars and eat-in wine shops

Paris is the capital city with the largest number of wine bars, often owned by genuine wine aficionados with a passion for their trade and an unerring instinct for choosing top-quality wines. They will unhesitatingly recommend what they consider to be the finest vintages, going beyond recognized wine appellations and AOC labels. 'Natural' wines are much in vogue at numerous wine bars, some of which are completely devoted to these.

Food bars are a new concept - a blend of a bar and dining space, halfway between a brasserie and a table d'hôtes. These convivial places often serve classic fare such as regional specialities with organic wine. Along the same lines, the 'cave à manger' is essentially an eat-in wine shop. And some fine food shops and caterers now have wine tasting sections on the premises.

> The craze for cocktails continues!

Mixology is enjoying a fresh wave of popularity in trendy Paris bars. Barmen trained at top hotels abroad excel in the art of concocting rum, vodka and tequila based cocktails, making fruit purées and sourcing rare spirits. All kinds of cocktails can be found on drinks menus in Parisian bars, and they keep changing with the seasons.

> The best baguette in Paris

The baguette is a staple of French gastronomy: no Parisian table would be complete without it! So much so that an award is given out each year to the artisan baker who makes the best baguette. In 2015 Djibril Bodian of the 'Grenier à pain' bakery in the 18th arrondissement won the prize for the second time, after previously winning it in 2010. He stepped into the shoes of the 2014 winner Antonio Teixeira, the artisan baker at 'Aux délices du palais' in the 14th arrondissement. Foodies can enjoy the quintessential Parisian loaf and ponder the fact that they're eating the same baguette as the French President: the winner supplies the Elysée Palace for a year!

> Paris delicatessens

Paris's fine food stores are a constant source of delight. Fresh, exotic and upscale products line the gourmet French and world food shelves. Quality, authenticity and originality are the hallmarks of Paris delicatessens. Renowned establishments include La Grande Épicerie de Paris and Lafayette Gourmet. Then there are world-class caterers and stores specializing in luxury products: caviar, salmon, truffles and so on. Some stores even have special sections devoted to jam, fruit juice and breakfast products.

> Cooking lessons

What could be more natural than wanting to discover the secrets of top chefs in a city renowned for both haute cuisine and inventive cooking? Many prestigious chefs have their own schools (Lenôtre, Alain Ducasse, Cyril Lignac, Guy Martin). What's more, young chefs are breaking with tradition and offering express training-tasting sessions at lunchtime or aperitif time - ideal for working people and visitors with limited time to spare.

> Gourmet walks

Gourmet food trails are an enjoyable and offbeat way to explore Paris. Several companies offer guided gastronomic walking tours, as well as chocolate and market tours with Parisians or chefs, and visits to artisan bakeries or patisseries. These delicious walks explore an integral part of Parisian culture - food - while offering many opportunities to indulge in tasting sessions.
